

THE DEDICATED PART TIME ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGER

Why an Environmental Manager?

The ever-changing environmental regulations and specialist nature of environmental technology makes it difficult for the non-specialist to keep pace with developments and to identify and to prioritise the necessary actions.

Increasingly progressive companies rather than calling in experts as the need arises are proactively embedding specialist managers within their organisations as part of the management team to prevent environmental issues becoming problems.

The Role of a Dedicated, Part Time Manager

The role of a dedicated part time environmental manager is to look after the environmental issues on behalf of the business through the following activities:

- Identifying the environmental impacts of the business's activities.
- Managing the sources of and reducing the extent of those impacts.
- Purchasing appropriate equipment and services.
- Applying for the appropriate permissions and licences.
- Negotiating with regulatory authorities.
- Tracking the changes in relevant legislation.
- Developing environmental awareness throughout the business.
- Assisting in bidding for work from environmentally aware clients.
- Promoting the environmental values of the business.
- Regularly auditing activities to ensure continuing environmental compliance.

The Benefits of a Dedicated, Part Time Manager

A dedicated part time environmental manager makes available the expertise of a full-time professional to smaller business.

- Lower Costs Part time managers cost less than full time managers.
- Greater efficiency Only the larger companies with more complex operations require a full-time manager. Why appoint a full-time person for part time work
- Greater expertise A specialist provides a depth of expertise that is not normally found within a small business.

THE DEDICATED PART TIME ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGER

- Practical applications A specialist is able to draw on extensive practical experience.
- Eases regulation A specialist is able to build up relationships with the relevant regulators.
- Peace of Mind The knowledge that a specialist is looking after the environmental aspects of the business leaves you to concentrate on its core profit making activities.
